Further detail will be provided in our H1FY27 results, including the progress we are making in unlocking transactional efficiency and reinvesting these gains to drive future growth.

[1] Guidance for net revenue growth includes recent increases to interest rates made by central banks and assumes no material change in the proportion of interest paid to customers and omits any further income or expense that may result from further changes in central bank rates that may occur.

Kristo Käärmann, Co-founder and Chief Executive Officer, commented:

"More than 12 million customers chose Wise this quarter to move over $70 billion around the world, paying 49bps on average, with 78% of transfers completed instantly. Customers are also using Wise for more of their everyday financial needs - spending $14 billion on Wise cards and increasing holdings to $44 billion.

"We continued to expand our network, products and features so Wise can serve more people and businesses around the world. This quarter, we went live in Malaysia with our ninth direct integration, launched the Wise Account and Wise Card in Thailand, introduced Wise Assets in New Zealand and announced our Wise Platform partnership with OakNorth to power international payments for its UK business customers.

*We present cross-border volume on a constant currency basis to facilitate comparison of underlying growth trends without the effects of exchange rate fluctuations. To calculate cross-border volume on a constant currency basis, we translate volume for the current period using the average monthly exchange rates from the comparable prior period for operations with functional currencies other than the U.S. dollar.

Differences between 'total' rows and the sum of the constituent components of personal and business are due to rounding.

[1] Total number of unique customers who have completed at least one cross-border transaction in the given period.

[3] Customer balances do not include Assets under custody, which are not recognized on Wise's balance sheet.

[4] Assets under custody represent customer deposits held via Wise Assets.

[5] Customer holdings is the sum of customer balances held directly and those held via Wise Assets (which are not recognized on Wise's balance sheet).
